

FROM THE EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Ladies and Gentlemen,

We're happy and proud to present to you issue 3/2022 of our journal. It features texts by authors from four countries (Poland, Slovakia, Hungary, UK). The issue includes several highly topical articles on financial law, as well as a number of interesting texts on the judiciary and on elections, among others.

The next issue (4/2022) will address entirely the problems of the administration of justice, mainly from the perspective of the theory and philosophy of law and the sociology of law.

In 2023 we will – inter alia – continue to cover the issue of remote hearings. The first of the articles addressing this topic appeared in issue 2/2022 (Remote hearings and judicial symbolism. A draft), which also includes a recap of a national conference on this subject, organised by “The Critique of Law” in May 2022.

We encourage authors from all over the world to submit their articles to “The Critique of Law”. We look forward to receiving texts on the theory and philosophy of law and public law in the broadest sense. Preferably written in English.

We are pleased to announce that we have adopted a state-of-the-art publication management system called Scholar One Manuscript of Clarivate.

If any of you, either authors or reviewers, finds it difficult to use the system, please take a look at the guide available at www.krytykaprawa.pl or contact Anna Goryńska, our editorial assistant, by e-mail, who will quickly provide you with the necessary help and support.

We would like to congratulate Prof. Adam Czarnota, PhD, DSc, Chairman of our Scientific Board, on taking up the position of Rector at the Riga Graduate School of Law (Latvia), <https://www.rgsl.edu.lv/>

We would also like to announce that our Editorial Board has become bigger. We've had KU Professor Joanna Kielin-Maziarz join our team as a section editor for constitutional law, EU law, and environmental law. We're really happy to see our team grow.

I hope you enjoy issue 3 of our journal.
